

Library Home Page

www.worcester.edu/library

Blog This!

<http://wrmlibrary.wordpress.com>

The WSC Library has entered into the world of blogging—called the blogosphere. The Blog is a great way to keep current with what's up @ our library!

Now when we subscribe to a new database or other online research tool, a vendor changes its platform to a newer version—users will know about it right away instead of having to wait until we have enough stories to fill a newsletter issue; then wait until the newsletter is written, printed and published — by which time it's old news!

The Virtual Library never closes

Many library blogs also link to Websites that offer tips for online research, new ways to combat plagiarism, creative alternatives to assigning a term paper, or ways to encourage students to incorporate more library resources into their research.

Ready to start reading? Link from the Library Website homepage or at <http://wrmlibrary.wordpress.com>

Why a Blog?

RSS Feeds

Sign Up right on the Blog! Click the link and subscribe to have the feed show up on your Internet Favorites RSS feed tab or other RSS aggregator.

Tag Clouds

Find related articles about areas of library research that you are interested in.

Comments

Join in.

Library Photos

When a new photo gets posted on our brand new Flickr site, you'll know about it right away—click on the link to see all the photos on our Flickr site.

Volume 7, Issue #2

Fall 2009

Last Newsletter

This will be the last issue of the Library Website newsletter, Library Home Page. There will be no further print or online issues. All issues will remain archived on the Library Website.

The newsletter first started in 1998 as a promotional tool for the new Library online catalog, and was named Voyager FAQs. The next phase was Lancer Home Page and that finally evolved into the present Library Home Page.

Electronic Resources
(508) 929-8801
bbrenneman@worcester.edu