Alisan Porter (born June 20, 1981) is an American singer, and former actress and dancer. As a child, Porter made acting appearances in Parenthood, Stella and I Love You to Death. Her breakout role came in 1991, when she played the lead in the film Curly Sue opposite Jim Belushi.

As an adult, Porter pursued roles in musical theatre, including a run on Broadway in The Ten Commandments: The Musical. A solo album followed in 2009. In 2016, she auditioned for NBC’s The Voice, earning a spot on Team Christina. Porter was announced in May as the winner of season 10.

Born to Jewish parents in Worcester, Massachusetts, Porter is the great-granddaughter of prominent Worcester rabbi Joseph Klein. Her grandmother ran the Charlotte Klein Dance Center. Porter's father, Ric Porter, was co-founder, lead singer, and songwriter of the Worcester-based band Zonkaraz. Her mother, Laura Klein, also taught dance, coaching Diane and Elaine Klimaszewski, who appeared on Star Search in 1987 in the junior dance category before they became known as the Coors Light Twins. While in Los Angeles for the twins' appearance on Star Search, the show's producer heard Porter singing in the hotel lobby and booked her to appear on the next episode. Porter has been singing and performing since age three; at age five, she became the youngest Star Search participant ever to win the competition.

Porter acted in several films as a child; she became known for playing the title role in the 1991 movie Curly Sue opposite Jim Belushi. On television, she played the youngest daughter of Lynn Redgrave on the short-lived ABC sitcom Chicken Soup in 1989. The following year, she was slated to be a new regular cast member on Perfect Strangers, but her character was dropped after only one episode.

Porter continued acting at Staples High School in Westport, Connecticut, where she joined a theater group and participated in various shows. While a freshman, Porter portrayed Anita in West Side Story, and as a senior played the lead in Cinderella. After Porter won The Voice in 2016, her former high school drama teacher said she was not surprised by the result. "She blew everybody away" with her performance in West Side Story, and "really seemed to get the best out of everybody else. Her energy rubbed off on everybody. She inspired others."

When she was 18 years old, Porter moved to New York to audition for Broadway shows. She was cast as Urleen in the show Footloose. Following her move to Los Angeles, Porter starred as Miriam in The Ten Commandments: The Musical at the Kodak Theater alongside Val Kilmer, Adam Lambert and Broadway star Lauren Kennedy. Variety called her performance of "Light of a New Day" "superb." In 2003, the band The Raz was formed, with Porter as the vocalist and main songwriter. The Raz split up in 2004. In March 2005, she announced the birth of her new band, The Alisan Porter Project. During 2006, she performed in the revival of A Chorus Line as Bebe Bensonheimer at the Gerald Schoenfeld Theatre in New York City. On October 9, 2009, her independent debut album Alisan Porter was released.

Porter sang the National Anthem at the 2016 A Capitol Fourth special on July 3 at the U.S. Capitol West Lawn in Washington, D.C. The special was broadcast on PBS. She also sang the anthem prior to the nationally televised Sunday Night Football game in Oakland, CA on November 6, 2016.

Early life

Shabazz was born in Queens, New York, on July 22, 1962. She was named after Elijah Muhammad, leader of the Nation of Islam, the religious and Black nationalist group to which her parents belonged.[1]

In February 1965, when she was two years old, Shabazz was present, with her mother and sisters, at the assassination of her father.[2] She says she has no memory of the event.[3]

Shabazz had an apolitical upbringing in a racially integrated neighborhood in Mount Vernon, New York. Her family never took part in demonstrations or attended rallies.[4] Together with her sisters, she joined Jack and Jill, a social club for the children of well-off African Americans.[5] She considered an acting career, though her mother was not supportive.[6] Her mother instead took interest in trying to keep her father's presence alive, and baked her cookies, which she would break a piece off to give the impression that her father had eaten it before she came.[7]

Concerning her father, Shabazz told an interviewer, "My mother always talked about our father, her husband, but ... she didn't talk about these things that defined my father as the icon."[8] To learn about her father, Shabazz read his autobiography as a college student,[9] and enrolled in a class to learn more.[10]

Shabazz was a student at Hackley School.[11] After high school, she attended State University of New York at New Paltz.[12] When she arrived, other African-American students expected her to be a firebrand. They had already elected her an officer of the Black Student Union.[9]

After graduating, Shabazz earned a master's degree in Education and Human Resource Development from Fordham University.[13]
Career

As of 2007, Shabazz worked as Director of Public Affairs and Special Events for the city of Mount Vernon.[13]

Shabazz wrote Growing Up X, her memoir of her childhood and her personal views on her father, in 2002.[14] A devout Muslim, she made the pilgrimage to Mecca, the hajj, in 2006 as her father had in 1964 and her mother did in 1965.[13][15]

In 2007, Shabazz was an advising scholar in the award-winning, PBS-broadcast documentary Prince Among Slaves, produced by Unity Productions Foundation. In 2015, her young-adult novel X was published.[16]

Shabazz is the founder of Malcolm X Enterprises and is a trustee for the Malcolm X and Dr. Betty Shabazz Memorial and Educational Center.

Personal life

Shabazz is a longtime resident of Southern Westchester, living in Mount Vernon for most of her childhood years, and presently in New Rochelle, New York.

MARK W. FULLER AND JANICE L. FULLER

On November 12, 2009, Worcester State University celebrated the dedication of the newly refurbished Fuller Theatre located in the Iconic Shaughnessy Administration Building. This commemoration was made possible by the extraordinary generosity of the George F. and Sybil H. Fuller Foundation. The Fuller family’s history with Worcester State University spans more than six decades as students, faculty, and champions of scholarships, diversity and the arts. Collectively, the Fullers have witnessed and been an integral part of the transformation of Worcester State University. In fact, Mark Fuller stated on the occasion of the dedication of the theatre that the transformation has been exceptional and amazing. “You are bringing in a full complement of students, I’d argue that you are literally overflowing with qualified applicants who want to come here and get a wonderful education.”

The Fullers continued their philanthropic ways by supporting the university’s Latino Education Institute, numerous scholarships, other capital projects, and academic programming. So, too, have they assumed leadership roles on Boards and committees, always with Worcester State University and its students’ best interests at the forefront. The accolades continue yet the Fuller’s never seek the limelight. They exemplify citizens for others as is evidenced by their leadership at Worcester State University as well as their magnificent involvement on numerous charitable local foundations.

Often described as pillars of our society, Mark and Jan Fuller are devoted directors on a multitude of charitable boards including the Be Like Brit Foundation, the Harvey Ball World Smile Foundation, the Worcester Education Collaborative, Calliope Theater and so many more.
“We make a living by what we get, but we make a life by what we give.” These words spoken by the late Sir Winston Churchill, prime minister of the United Kingdom, are ones by which alumnus Phillip M. Wasylean II, lives.

Since his graduation in 1963, Mr. Wasylean has shared his gifts of time, talents, and financial resources with Worcester State University. Serving on numerous alumni committees and boards, Mr. Wasylean has devoted countless hours listening and addressing our students’ evolving needs and those of the institution. Always willing to step up to the plate with cogent ideas, Mr. Wasylean has advanced alma mater’s offerings to well align with the twenty-first century public higher education student experience.

A benefactor for thirty-five plus years, Mr. Wasylean has given freely and generously to the University’s scholarship program, endowing numerous scholarships to memorialize professors’ emeriti and various reunion classes. So, too, Mr. Wasylean has provided leadership funding for our unrestricted endowment, the arts, and academic programming. A pioneer in his own right, Mr. Wasylean was the first individual for whom a university structure was named, based on the monetary threshold established by the Foundation Board and unanimously approved by the Board of Trustees. In 2004, Wasylean Hall was officially unveiled to chronicle the largest bequest in the university’s history, a $1 million life insurance policy, from Mr. Wasylean.

Continuing with his legacy of giving, Mr. Wasylean not only endowed a scholarship in his class’ name on the occasion of their fiftieth reunion, but also issued a challenge match to the classes of 1960, 1964, and 1966 on the occasions of their respective reunions! And, to incentivize our young alumni, he proffered a $10,000 challenge to the classes of 2001 – 2016.
Phil Wasylean Matches $100 Gifts

Nov. 19, 2015

Phillip M. Wasylean II ’63 says his philanthropic philosophy can be summed up in a Winston Churchill quote: “We make a living by what we get, but we make a life by what we give.”

One of WSU’s most generous benefactors, Wasylean is hoping to encourage other alumni, especially young alumni, to feel the same sense of satisfaction in giving back to their alma mater. To jump start that commitment, he has created a $10,000 challenge grant that will match the first 100 gifts of $100 from graduates of the Classes of 2000 to 2015 in support of the Change Lives capital campaign.

“I’m hoping that young alumni will recognize what a great bargain they received with Worcester State’s excellent education. I know I do,” says Wasylean. “By giving, you become part of the future growth of the university. I hope we can encourage young alumni to meet the challenge and give back to students of the future.”

The $15 million Change Lives campaign is raising money for student scholarships, academic development, capital projects and equipment, and other University priorities.

Over the years, Wasylean has donated more than $1 million to benefit students, especially for scholarships. The first of his family to attend college, he credits the preparation he received at Worcester State Teachers College for giving him the foundation to succeed in his 42-year teaching career. He created the Phillip M. Wasylean II Endowed Scholarship to help the next generation of passionate, dedicated teachers make a difference in the classroom.

Over his career, Wasylean taught English, Spanish, social studies, English as a second language, bilingual education, and drama. He was a yearbook advisor, media specialist, and drama director and producer. He was honored at the Kennedy Library in 1993 as the recipient of the JFK Teaching Award. Wasylean led humanities and writing workshops at the local, regional, and national levels, including at the Massachusetts Association for Bilingual Education’s annual convention. He also spent 35 years with the Hampton (New Hampshire) Playhouse as an actor and entertainment director.

Wasylean has contributed generously to a scholarship that honors his class—as well as other classes—at reunion time. His goal is to have every class from the 1960s create an endowed scholarship for future students. He has given more than $30,000 in reunion giving, some in the form of matching gifts to inspire other alumni to follow his example. In recognition of his exceptional loyalty, commitment, and dedication to WSU and its students, he was given the 2009 Distinguished Alumni Award for Outstanding Service to Alma Mater. Wasylean Hall was also named in his honor in 2004.

Phil has also made an impact outside of WSU with his philanthropic efforts. For 25 years, he organized “Magic of Christmas,” a program that generated donations of thousands of toys for children in South Providence, R.I., and Lawrence, Mass. The Worcester State Foundation honored Wasylean with the 2015 I. Robert Freelander Award in recognition of his dedication to the ideals, principles, spirit, and benevolence of the late I. Robert Freelander.

Donors can make a $100 gift in monthly installments, which calculates out to just $8.33 per month. Or you can pledge $100 to be paid over multiple years—for instance, $25 a year for four years. To make a donation, visit alumni.worcester.edu/WasyleanChallenge.

Nominating Patricia Yancey, WSU Class of 2000, for Community Service

Telegram & Gazette, Sept. 24, 2016

WORCESTER — Religious leaders from an array of local faith-based institutions will gather Tuesday on the steps of City Hall to pray.

Dr. George Yancey, first vice president of the local chapter of the NAACP, said among those attending the Faith in Worcester Day of Prayer will be leaders from diverse communities of faith, including Baptist, Buddhist, Catholic, Episcopalian, Greek Orthodox, Jewish, Muslim, Quaker, and Seventh-day Adventist, as well as non-denominational ministries and cultures such as African, African American, Latino and Haitian.

"We wanted to include all cultures because this is what Worcester looks like," he said.

NAACP chapter president Patricia Yancey, who is married to Dr. Yancey, said they have received an overwhelmingly positive response to the event.
Rabbi Michael Swarttz of Beth Tikvah Synagogue will signal the start of the program at 5:30 p.m. by sounding the shofar. Mayor Joseph Petty will give opening remarks.

Fifteen local men and women of the cloth will each lead the gathering in prayer.

They will pray for intervention in a host of social ills, including drug addiction, hunger, homelessness, poverty, racism and violence. They will pray for city leaders, police, firefighters, teachers, youth, families, businesses and economic development and equal prosperity. They will pray for all people who live and work in the city and that they treat one another with compassion, dignity, respect, love and tolerance.
“Most people recognize the NAACP and know we are leaders for social justice and civil rights, but sometimes they forget where this work is rooted — in humanity and compassion,” Ms. Yancey said. “In this world of growing hostility and divisiveness, and with animosity growing within Worcester, we thought it was time for a different voice to be heard. Worcester is in need of prayer — all of our prayers.”

Dr. Yancey, who heads the Religious Affairs Committee of the NAACP, said in addition to prayers, the Rev. Leonard Cowan will give a brief history of immigration in the city.

The event will also feature a patriotic musical performance by Lydia Fortune and Tom Conner, as well as wrap up with children from various houses of worship singing "God Bless America."

He said plans for the gathering were not prompted by recent police-involved shootings, but have been in the works for several months.

"As we look at all the challenges in the city, state and country, we think it is time to try to bring people together, and if we are going to go through some kind of healing, we think people of faith should be in the forefront of that," said Dr. Yancey, a semi-retired veterinarian who is married to Patricia.

Another goal, he said, was to promote dialogue among the leaders, of which more than 60 were sent invitations.

"We want everybody to come and by bringing all these faith leaders together, I’m hoping they get to know each other a little bit better."

RE: Approval of Honorary Degrees at Academic Achievement Ceremony

DATE: March 7, 2017

The nominees were vetted through the Speaker and Awards Committee and the All University Committee. I concur with their recommendation and submit the following for your approval:

Fuller, Mark W. and Janice L.

In November of 2009, WSU celebrated the dedication of the newly refurbished Fuller Theatre located in the Shaughnessy Administration Building. This commemoration was made possible by the generosity of the George F. and Sybil H. Fuller Foundation. The Fuller family’s history with WSU spans more than six decades as students, faculty, and champions of scholarships, diversity and the arts. The Fullers continued their philanthropic ways by supporting the university’s Latino Education Institute, numerous scholarships, other capital projects, and academic programming. They have assumed leadership roles on Boards and committees, always with WSU and its students’ best interest at the forefront. They exemplify citizens for others as is evidenced by their leadership at WSU as well as their magnificent involvement on numerous charitable local foundations.

In recognition of his outstanding service to the community and to WSU, I respectfully request your approval of the awarding of an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa, to Mark W. Fuller at our Academic Achievement Awards ceremony on April 27, 2017.

Wasylean II, Phillip M.

Since his graduation in 1963, he shared his gifts of time, talents, and financial resources with WSU. Serving on numerous alumni committees and boards, he has devoted countless hours listening and addressing our students’ evolving needs and those of the institution. A benefactor for thirty-five plus years, he has given freely and generously to the university’s scholarship program, endowing numerous scholarships to memorialize professors emeriti and various reunion classes. A pioneer in his own right, he was the first individual for whom a university structure was named, based on the monetary threshold established by the Foundation Board and unanimously approved by the Board of Trustees. In 2004, Wasylean Hall was officially unveiled to chronicle the largest bequest in the university’s history, a $1 million life insurance policy.

In recognition of his outstanding service to the community and to WSU, I respectfully request your approval of the awarding of an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa, to Phillip M. Wasylean II at our Academic Achievement Awards ceremony on April 27, 2017.
On November 12, 2009, Worcester State University celebrated the dedication of the newly refurbished Fuller Theatre located in the iconic Shaughnessy Administration Building. This commemoration was made possible by the extraordinary generosity of the George F. and Sybil H. Fuller Foundation. The Fuller family’s history with Worcester State University spans more than six decades as students, faculty, and champions of scholarships, diversity and the arts. Collectively, the Fullers have witnessed and been an integral part of the transformation of Worcester State University. In fact, Mark Fuller stated on the occasion of the dedication of the theatre that the transformation has been exceptional and amazing. “You are bringing in a full complement of students, I’d argue that you are literally overflowing with qualified applicants who want to come here and get a wonderful education.”

The Fullers continued their philanthropic ways by supporting the university’s Latino Education Institute, numerous scholarships, other capital projects, and academic programming. So, too, have they assumed leadership roles on Boards and committees, always with Worcester State University and its students’ best interests at the forefront. The accolades continue yet the Fuller’s never seek the limelight. They exemplify citizens for others as is evidenced by their leadership at Worcester State University as well as their magnificent involvement on numerous charitable local foundations.

Often described as pillars of our society, Mark and Jan Fuller are devoted directors on a multitude of charitable boards including the Be Like Brit Foundation, the Harvey Ball World Smile Foundation, the Worcester Education Collaborative, Calliope Theater and so many more.
