- Disappearing Marine Iguanas: A Scientific Whodunit
The Galapágos islands are home to the four-foot-long marine iguana, the only iguana known to swim in the ocean. In 1998, scientists noticed an alarming trend in their numbers, with a significant proportion of their population dying off. What could be causing this population collapse? You will use information from ecology, oceanography, biology, and climatology to investigate these creatures and why their population suddenly declined. Along the way, you'll use the same principles of iterative reasoning scientists use as they develop hypotheses to answer questions about the world.
- Allison Dunn, Professor, Earth Environment and Physics*

Get your Worcester State gear at the Campus Bookstore!
Student Center, 1st Floor: 9:30 a.m. – 2 p.m.

Cheer on the Lancers! WSU Football vs. Bridgewater State at 12 p.m.
